

ImportYeti Removal Guide

Removal Workflow

A step-by-step guide for finding company exposure on ImportYeti, preserving the right evidence, understanding the CBP confidentiality path, and tracking what changed after a request.

Audience: Operators and founders who want a documented process before contacting trade data platforms.

What This Resource Covers

- How to search for the company names, alternate spellings, and supplier names that usually create the first exposure trail.
- What evidence to save before asking CBP, ImportYeti, or a search platform to review exposed records.
- How to verify whether removal changed the public page, search snippets, and linked supplier records.

Start with a clean record

Before sending any request, capture what exists. Save the visible company page, exposed suppliers, shipment descriptions, dates, and any search result snippets that summarize the relationship. This avoids the common problem of not being able to prove what changed after the platform updates a page.

Search beyond the exact legal name

Import records often include abbreviations, punctuation differences, old addresses, freight forwarder spellings, and translated supplier names. The guide walks through those variations because most missed exposure comes from assuming the company only appears one way.

Treat removal as a loop

After CBP, ImportYeti, or a search platform handles a request, rerun the same searches and check whether linked pages still reveal the relationship. If supplier pages or public snippets keep the connection alive, document those separately instead of assuming the original request covered everything.

Before You Use This PDF

- Search company legal name, DBA names, old names, and common misspellings.
- Save source URLs and screenshots before submitting a request.
- Do not assume one ImportYeti page request suppresses future vessel manifest data; track CBP confidentiality and platform follow-up separately.
- Check supplier pages, customer pages, and search snippets after removal.
- Schedule a later review for newly imported records or refreshed indexes.

Fact-Check Notes

- Source context: ImportYeti describes its database as public customs shipment records from bills of lading and says companies may be missing when records are private or shipment mode is not sea freight.
- ImportYeti points people with publicly filed personal information to the CBP Vessel Manifest Confidentiality Request and its contact form.
